A MESSAGE FROM THE DEAN

As a fitting conclusion to the Columbus School of Law’s centenary celebration I am pleased to enclose this centennial faculty bibliography. Its purpose is to record in one place the substantial body of faculty publishing efforts since the inception of the Catholic University Law School in 1897. From its humble beginnings under the tutelage of founding Dean William Callyhan Robinson, through its adolescent period when, like so many other American law schools, it was trying to define its pedagogical niche, to its eventual merger with the Columbus University Law School in 1954, the law school at Catholic University has always retained a scholarly and remarkably productive faculty. The sheer quantity of writing, the breadth of research and the impressive list of law journals that include our faculty among their authors are exemplary. The publishing houses which regularly engage our faculty as authors are likewise impressive. One can certainly appreciate why the Columbus School of Law has been, and continues to be, a leader among law schools in scholarly research and writing.

Ours is a richly textured faculty with a wide variety of professional experience: academia, law firms, government, courts, and business. They write in widely diverse areas of the law, their topics both national in scope and seminal in nature. Through their scholarship they seek to evaluate constructively what is law, to effect changes in poorly constructed law, and to develop arenas for critical thinking about what law should be.

Firmly believing that it is useful to occasionally sit back and reflect upon the heritage that has shaped this law school and the careers of so many alumni and alumnae, I am pleased to share this publication with you. I also wish to particularly thank our dedicated library staff who have undertaken to prepare this publication for the law school.

Dean Bernard Dobranski
It is therefore necessary that memorable things should be committed to writing, the witness of times, the light and the life of truth, and not wholly betaken to slippery memory which seldom yields a certain reckoning.

Sir Edward Coke

The Columbus School of Law of The Catholic University of America celebrated its centennial year in 1997. One hundred years is a long time, even in the life of the law. In an effort to remedy the deficiency of a “slippery memory” of which Lord Coke speaks, I am pleased and proud to present this record of the scholarly writings of the law faculty, both past and present.

This bibliography collects citations to faculty publications from the early beginnings of The Catholic University Law School (1897 – 1954) through its later reincarnation as the Columbus School of Law of The Catholic University of America. (This was the result of the 1954 merger with the Columbus University School of Law, established by the Knights of Columbus in 1922.) The project has allowed us to explore our roots, to acknowledge the scholarly contributions of our full-time faculty, and to celebrate (in Lord Coke’s words) the law school’s witness to “the light and the life of truth.”
The following are included in this publication:

• Citations to publications of the full-time faculty covering the first 100 years of the law school—1897 through 1997. Entries are arranged by publication type: books, book chapters, book reviews, journal articles, encyclopedia pieces and bibliographies.

• Citations to publications of the current library staff.

• Photographs of each of the deans and acting deans of the law school.

• A list of all full-time and part-time faculty members who have served the law school from 1897 to the present.

With few exceptions, the bibliography is limited to the publications of full-time faculty. The precise status of faculty members in the early years of the law school is not easily discerned. Since it is difficult to determine whether early professors had full- or part-time status, great latitude was observed when making these selections.

The bibliography also attempts to focus on publications which are primarily legal in character. The early law school had a highly inter-disciplinary faculty with members drawn from the schools of philosophy, psychology, canon law, and theology. This bibliography attempts to include only those publications that are legal in character, and does not include the works of faculty whose primary focus was non-legal.

As with any undertaking that attempts to capture the work product of a diverse and productive faculty over an entire century, there are undoubtedly omissions and errors. The reference staff of the Judge Kathryn J. DuFour Law Library will continue to maintain this bibliography, not only adding new publications by the current and future faculty, but also making corrections and additions to present listings.

Acknowledgments

A project of this scope required the efforts of a dedicated corps of librarians who deserve recognition. Associate Library Director Pat Petit served as the primary editor. Invaluable research assistance was provided by reference librarians Diana Botluk, Yvette Brown, Frances Brillantine, Rachel Jones, Linda Baltrusch, Karen Hinson, Matthew Mahaffie, Justin Murray, Theresa Burress, and Amanda McCabe. Dawn Sobol and Judith Capurso of the library’s circulation staff contributed hours of cite-checking and proofreading. Library Secretary, Bernice Olszowka, and her successor, Judy Ann Blower, typed the manuscript and its many revisions.

In addition, the law library staff would like to thank Dr. Timothy J. Meagher, Archivist and Director of The Catholic University of America Archives, and staff member, Jennifer Jukes, for their assistance in helping to identify research sources and photographs. The library is also indebted to Provost Emeritus C. Joseph Nuesse for permission to use quotes from his article entitled, “The Thrust of Legal Education at The Catholic University of America, 1895–1954.”

Editor’s Note: Although only works produced during the faculty member’s tenure at Catholic University are generally included in this bibliography, several articles written by Professor Keeffe when he was on the faculty at Cornell Law School from 1938–1953 are included here. As any of Professor Keeffe’s many students can attest, his teaching and publications at Catholic University cannot be fully appreciated without reference to his seminal earlier works such as, Weary Erie, “Washingtonians and Romanians,” and “Drumhead Justice.”

Professor Keeffe was also a columnist for the American Bar Association Journal from 1953–1979. His wide-ranging observations appeared in a column entitled, at various times, “Practicing Lawyer’s Guide to Current Law Magazines,” “Reactions to Current Legal Literature,” and, finally, “Current Legal Literature.” This bibliography does not include specific citations to the nearly 300 columns that Professor Keeffe wrote in his 27 years as a columnist for the Journal.

Deans
The Catholic University Law School and
Columbus School of Law
…raised the question “whether this University shall emancipate itself from subservience to variable bar requirements, shall cut itself loose from the crowd of competing professional schools, and shall confine itself to scientific methods of study in reference to all its legal instruction.”

… eulogized “for completing the transition to the case method of instruction and improvement of the law library.”

Dean Peter J. McLoughlin

1921-1928

... under his stewardship “the school was the first in the District of Columbia to be officially recognized as being in compliance with ABA standards.”

… included “outstanding Catholic lawyers in informal discussion and in a meeting called for on March 4, 1929, Justice Pierce Butler of the United States Supreme Court was one of the participants.”

With Fox’s appointment, “the rector felt that he could report ‘that the Law School has again been put on the road originally outlined by the late Dean Robinson, to produce a learned, scholarly, and cultured Catholic bar’.”

... “resurrected the old question of moving the school to a downtown location, even to the point of identifying specific buildings for which he had obtained blueprints.”

DEAN ROBERT J. WHITE

1937–1948

“We have determined upon the policy of building the school up to one hundred carefully chosen students, who by their scholastic records and character, give promise not only of success as lawyers, but real Catholic influence in public affairs.”

... established “Catholic University Law Review, which was approved by the university at the end of 1949 on the conditions that it have a faculty adviser and advance funding.”

“… created the Columbus School of Law, nurtured if from a very few students in a downtown 18th Street townhouse to many students in the new Leahy Hall.”

Contact 4, no. 1, p. 1, May 1986
… proclaimed “no student should leave without understanding a couple of things: lawyers have power in American society, lawyers have the power to effect social change, and …they have an obligation to try to effect change for the better in society.”

Judicial Notice, III, no. 8, p. 3, March 21, 1977
ACTING DEANS

MICHAEL D. O’KEEFE
1974‒1975

RAYMOND E. GALLAGHER, JR.
1975‒1976

THEODORE VOORHEES
1976‒1977
DEAN JOHN L. GARVEY

1977–1979

… cited the school’s three strengths: “its smallness…concern for social justice and the emphasis on clinical education.”

Judicial Notice, III, no. 8, p. 3, March 21, 1977
“The level of classroom instruction and student rapport is the best I have experienced in legal education. The senior faculty has been recognized in a national survey as one of the most productive in number of scholarly publications. The younger faculty are meeting and exceeding this high standard.”

Contact, 5, no. 2, p. 1, February 1987
DEAN RALPH J. ROHNER

ACTING DEAN
1968–1969
DEAN
1987–1995

“The new building will become the focal point of our public image, and the symbol of our quest for excellence.”

Contact, 11, no. 3, p. 2, Winter 1993
“At Catholic University, what goes on is the development of dedicated men and women—faculty and students—with not only the technical skills necessary to be outstanding lawyers, but the commitment also to do justice and to have compassion for those to be served.”

Contact, 14, no. 2, p. 4, Spring/Summer 1997

“We are committed to gaining recognition as one of the best law schools and the best Catholic law schools in the nation.”

Contact, 15, no. 1, p. 2, Winter 1998
